BOTANICO

at THE GARAGE

FOREWORD

ABOUT

Botanico is inspired from the word 'Botany', which is the science of plant life and a branch of biology. Back in early days, Botany was used to identify and cultivate edible, medicinal and poisonous plants making it one of the oldest sciences in the world.

At Botanico, we take pride in using a diversity of ingredients from nature's produce that transcends through our cuisine and concoctions; brought to you by our resident chef and mixologists.

You are now in a secret garden within a garden where a gastronomic journey of botanical creation begins.

CHAPTER ONE

Nutmeg (Myristica fragrans)

Nutmeg is the seed or ground spice of several species of the genus Myristica. Myristica fragrans is a dark-leaved evergreen tree cultivated for two spices derived from its fruit: nutmeg and mace.

NUTS

History

Nuts have been a staple in the human diet since the beginning of time. In Singapore, “Kacang Puteh”, which means “white nuts”, is a popular traditional snack that is an assortment of nuts wrapped in thin paper cones made from old newspapers and magazine pages.

Uses

Nuts are a highly prized food and energy source of nutrients for humans and wildlife. They are not only rich in protein and good fats, but also add texture to dishes such as the “Grilled Beef Tongue” with cashew cream

– a popular appetizer in Botanico.

CHAPTER TWO

Tembusu (Fagraea fragrans)

The tembusu is a large evergreen tree in the family Gentianaceae. It is native to Southeast Asia. Its trunk is dark brown, with deeply fissured bark, looking somewhat like a bittergourd. It grows in an irregular shape from 10 to 25m high

TREES

History

Some of the oldest heritage trees in Singapore can be found on the very soil you are resting on. In Singapore Botanic Gardens, you can find the Tembusu (Cyrtophyllum fragrans) tree that is over 170 years old and an icon that is featured at the back of the Singapore $5 note.

Uses

One of the primary purposes that trees serve is to provide wood which has traditionally been used for fuel. Using wood and fire is one of the earliest methods of cooking and is similarly practiced here at Botanico by using charcoal to create the selection of food “From The Inka”.

CHAPTER THREE

Ginger (Zingiber officinale)

Ginger is a flowering plant whose rhizome, ginger root or simply ginger, is widely used as a spice or a folk medicine. It is a herbaceous perennial which grows annual pseudostems about a meter tall bearing narrow leaf blades.

ROOTS

History

Roots were main sources of carbohydrates for our ancestors and remain an important source of energy. Root vegetables like tapioca and sweet potato were some of the most common wartime foods eaten during the Japanese occupation in Singapore, as rice and meat were scarce.

Uses

Roots are high in nutrients and are an important source of fiber, required for a balanced diet. Edible roots such as ginger and beetroot are some of the ingredients that are used in dishes served at Botanico.

CHAPTER FOUR

Cloves (Syzygium aromaticum)
Cloves are the aromatic flower buds of a tree in the family Myrtaceae, Syzygium aromaticum. They are native to the Maluku Islands in Indonesia, and are commonly used as a spice.

HERBS AND SPICES

History

Early uses of herbs and spices were connected to medicine and preservation. Clove and nutmeg are examples of the first few spices to be introduced in Singapore and the city-state quickly grew into a major historical port for the spice trade between Asia and Europe.

Uses

Herbs and spices are now commonly used in the culinary world for flavouring and colouring and are packed with health benefits. If you take a closer look, you can find some of these herbs and spices used in Botanico's menu items.
